BUILT TO PERFORM.

CREATED TO SERVE.

Getting organized

Most of us have an array of important papers and personal information to keep safe. How quickly could you locate this information if it were immediately needed? In our experience, very few people can find their most important documents when a need arises. And as we age, for many of us, our memory gradually declines, making it even more difficult to remember where this information is filed. Imagine how hard it might be for your loved ones if you become incapacitated and the information they need to handle your affairs can't be found.

The purpose of this guide is to help you (and your loved ones if you are incapacitated or die) locate all of your vital personal and financial information. It covers a variety of critical topics—from your family records to legal documents. This easy-to-use resource is just one way TIAA is dedicated to helping you and your family prepare for financial well-being and security.

Remember, we're here whenever you need us—to answer your questions and provide you with the information you need to help ensure your loved ones have the appropriate amount of financial protection. TIAA companies offer a wide selection of retirement plans, life insurance, IRAs, after-tax annuities, education savings and banking¹—all provided with the expertise and experience of TIAA.

Personal information

This collection of information about yourself and your family is the starting point for your preparation.

- 1 Gather your personal identification documents, as well as those of family members—including drivers' licenses, Social Security cards and birth certificates.
- 2 After the identification documents are assembled, make acid-free color copies of each document should any page be lost or stolen.
- 3 Once the information is completely filled out, keep all originals in a safe place. Remember to save any government contact information to replace any official documents.

Insurance

Insurance, whether homeowner's, life or disability, is an integral part of your financial well-being and can provide your loved ones with peace of mind against the unexpected. To ensure that a policy is not overlooked, consider having each policy inventoried, accessible and current.

- 1 Gather all documents that pertain to your life, health, dental, home, auto and other liability insurance coverage. Keep contact information for your providers as well.
- 2 Make copies of your original insurance coverage documents and store them in a safe place. You, your caregiver or your survivors may need reliable and easy access should there ever be a need to file a claim.
- 3 Review your insurance coverage periodically to ensure that coverage stays current.

Professional advisors

This list should include a record of advisors and professionals that are responsible for guidance in specific areas of your life—from finance to healthcare to legal representation.

- 1 Gather contact information for each of the professionals that provide you and your family with personal, financial and health guidance.
- 2 Since many of these institutions are moving to paperless recordkeeping, be sure to include digital contact information including websites and email addresses.
- 3 Update this section frequently, as the people responsible for servicing your account can change.

Important financial documents

Use this section to record the institutions that you use to conduct your short- and long-term financial transactions—from banking and credit information to tax and loan contacts.

- 1 Work in conjunction with your financial service providers to gather updated contact information and customer service channels.
- 2 Ask for copies of any documents that outline the services each financial institution provides for you and your family.
- 3 Keep a record for each financial account you possess, including bank accounts, credit cards, loans and tax information.
- 4 Review your beneficiary designations for life insurance and retirement accounts; obtain verification from the institution.

Important legal documents

Use this section to document items such as your marriage certificate, will, trusts and power(s) of attorney, as well as property documentation, including automotive and home titles.

- 1 List the collection of legal documents that stipulate the conditions of such items as your last will and testament, trusts, military service record, especially DD-214 discharge form, marriage and/or divorce, and home and property information.
- 2 Make paper or digital copies of your original documents and store them in a safe place; you may need them for reference at a later date.
- 3 Keep this list and any applicable documents up-to-date and accessible to replace lost documents promptly.
- 4 If you are interested in a digital safe, contact your TIAA advisor about TIAA Safe Estate.

Home and asset inventory

This section outlines your physical possessions and will help prepare you should you experience a natural disaster—such as fire, tornado or hurricane—or should you be the victim of theft or vandalism.

- 1 Work in conjunction with your home insurance provider to complete a full list of items that may need replacing in the event of an emergency.
- 2 Make a video of each item you list and store the videos in a safe place; the videos will be of invaluable use to replace any items in the event of an emergency.
- 3 For your most valuable items, make and file copies of receipts and proofs-of-purchase.
